Marijuana, agriculture, veterans and nature addressed at General Council meeting

The annual General Council meeting on September 19, held at the Alliance Energy Center in Madison, addressed nine resolutions brought forward by tribal members.

The resolutions that passed are first sent to the Attorney General for opinion. Following that the Legislative Attorney as well as the Attorney for the General Council submit their opinions, according to Joy Thompson of the General Council Agency.

Legislative has made it a practice to “acknowledge” the resolutions by the 45-day mark. This year that will be October 31. This, however, does not mean that they act upon them, Thompson said.

Once the Attorney General submits her opinion the General Council Attorney and General Council Agency staff will work with Legislature to enact the passed resolutions.

At the General Council meeting, one of the most debated and contentious resolutions at the General Council meeting was a proposal to grow and process marijuana on tribal land. The resolution passed 63 percent (1,013 votes) for the resolution to 33.9 percent (544 votes) against and 3.1 percent (50) abstaining.

Hazel Guerrero introduced the resolution, advocating the legalization and sale of marijuana on tribal lands. Philip Blackhawk seconded the resolution.

Guerrero said that marijuana is not just to smoke to get high, but can be used for medicinal purposes.

A number of Ho-Chunk members followed her comments with comments of their own, some for and some against.

Kimberly Waukon spoke against the resolution.

“Under the previous president’s administration, the Nation declared a ‘state of emergency’ because of the incidences of drug addiction and the number of babies born to mothers who are addicted to drugs,” Waukon said. “Many times marijuana is a gateway to other drugs.”

“I don’t believe we are people who have a handle on substances,” said Marlys WhiteEagle, who was opposed to the resolution.

Betty Kingsley said that she has been a social worker since the 70s and all she did was help families who had family members who smoked marijuana or addicted to drugs.

“It’s heartbreaking,” she said. “This resolution is calling for the ruination of families and destruction of kids. I hope you would not vote for this catastrophe.”

Several people said they would be in favor of the resolution if it was further defined that the marijuana was for medical purposes, but they did not like the wording presented because it was too broad and would allow marijuana on tribal lands for any reason.

The final speaker was Elliot Littlejohn. Chairman Gerald Cleveland said that time was up for discussion on the resolution, but then said he would grant his two minutes.

“Marijuana is the leading cash crop on the planet,” Littlejohn said. “The Menominees are headed in that direction.”

He said that the Nation could prosper financially by growing marijuana and per cap could increase substantially.

“We need to hunt down the leading cash crop,” he said.

Another debated issue was an amendment to the Ho-Chunk Nation Constitution to allow the president to appoint department heads without having them to be approved by the Legislature.

The resolution was introduced by Anne Thundercloud. She stated that the present procedure creates a delay in getting executive directors into their jobs. Thundercloud proposed removing any provisions in the Constitution that require the Legislature to confirm the appointees.

She said, at present, the candidates for the executive positions need to submit a resume, have a background check performed and to have three references, then be approved at a hearing by Legislature.

“It’s beyond their (Legislature) authority,” said President Wilfrid Cleveland. “They overstep their bounds. As it is, the president is guessing who they would approve – who they would want as executive directors.”

But there were some people who agreed with the present system and disagreed with the proposed change.

Crystal Herriage said the process provides a means for people to oversee the process, not having one person who directs everything.

“There’s a reason for that,” Herriage said. “One person and one family should not be running everything for the Ho-Chunk Nation. No, I am not in favor of this.”

The resolution was defeated by a vote of 31.9 percent (450) in favor, 55.8 percent (787) against and 12.3 percent (173) abstaining.

Joyce Warner introduced a resolution to establish a Department of Agriculture and to move the Department of Natural Resources under the umbrella of the Executive branch of the Ho-Chunk Nation government.

“We need to grow food without pesticides and chemicals. We need food that is healthy so that we don’t get diseases like diabetes,” Warner said. “We need to give ourselves a clean environment.”

Gloria Visintin said that often the streams are contaminated because of farm runoff and wells are contaminated from frac sand mining operations. She said she supported the Ho-Chunk Nation to venture into agriculture.

The Guardian’s “Native American kids who get $200k for graduating” gets it wrong

Marlon WhiteEagle
Editor

Why is it so interesting for media outlets to look at Ho-Chunk high school graduates and their trust fund money? I figure they must be keeping tabs on the process of assimilation efforts that have been outlined by years of government policy.

They must be thinking, “When these Indians start spending their money wisely, like us white people, we’ve completely assimilated them.” I’m still waiting for the positive “18 money” story from some news source. But is that newsworthy?

We’ve seen the “18 money” story covered by numerous local newspapers and TV news. Now “18 money” has gone international with a 16 minute video produced by Jenny Kleeman of the Guardian, a London daily newspaper with an online presence.

The documentary, “Native American kids who get $200k for graduating”, released on July 29, can be viewed at the Guardian’s website or on YouTube.

The title will have you believe that a bunch of native kids got $200,000 because they simply graduated high school. Graduating from high school is something that most American kids do before entering college or joining the workforce or military. Some don’t even graduate, including Ho-Chunk students.

The title will also have you believe that each native graduate will receive the same amount: $200k. The Ho-Chunk Nation only enrolls Ho-Chunk children with at least a quarter blood quantum, with the enrollment process initiated by the Ho-Chunk child’s parents or grandparents. Sometimes, parents don’t enrolled their children right away or at all. So stating that each native kids gets $200k is misleading, but makes for a short, ballpark figure.

Lastly, on the title, are 18 year olds still kids? 18 year olds are the youngest of young adults. But at age 18, you can vote, join the military, and are legally responsible for yourself. The high school graduation ceremony, or commencement ceremony, is the acknowledgement of entering adulthood or “the real world”.

“Chasing wealth and the American Dream is not a Ho-Chunk way” might be a more accurate title. Or a more sarcastic title would be, “What are you going to buy with your 18 money?” That seems to be what’s most interesting.

The documentary focused on the Black River Falls High School Ho-Chunk graduates of the Class of 2015 as they approached graduation day. Kleeman planned her five-day visit in conjunction with the graduation day.

Kleeman said she first heard about “18 money” in 2013 while in a Utah meeting with the Division of Indian Affairs. The topic peaked her interest because she wondered if having a large sum of money would have made becoming an adult easier.

Like all the “18 money” stories, the Ho-Chunk students get asked, “What are you going to buy when you get your money?” Generally, we hear about a cars, trips, and going to college. That’s relatively normal for the age group. We also tend to hear the stories of alcohol, drugs, and blowing money within a couple months.

In Kleeman’s “18 money” story we hear the same thing. We also hear that graduation rates have gone up since 2001. This gives the impression that Ho-Chunk high school kids are only motivated by receiving the money. It should be the goal of the school district to increase graduation rates for everyone.

Kleeman proceeds to ask non-Ho-chunk students how they feel about Ho-Chunk graduates receiving a trust fund once they graduate. I feel that’s a tangent of what the documentary is really about: Ho-Chunk graduates.

I think society needs to recognize the difference between native and non-native. Tribal members get assigned tribal ID numbers in addition to a social security number to keep track of our population. Tribes are monitored by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, under the Department of Interior, just like the nation’s natural resource and wildlife. Where’s the Bureau of Germans, or British, or Irish? There’s the difference.

One of the documentary’s most on point clips is an interview with the school maintenance man, Wayne Wenthold. Wenthold said if someone gave him a large sum of money, he might not be there himself.

“I would have spent the money on a fast car, drugs, and alcohol. It’s an 18 thing (not a Ho-Chunk thing),” said Wenthold.

Kleeman interviewed Traditional Chief Clayton Winneshiek while she toured Ho-Chunk Gaming-Black River Falls.

“The kids these days have it worse than my parents and grandparents had it. There’s so much out there that takes away from who we are. We are losing our children to it; this money that they get. That’s a big part of it,” said Winneshiek.

Once again, Kleeman goes to collect the opinion of non-Ho-Chunk on a purely Ho-Chunk issue. She goes to a bar to talk about “18 money.” Don’t you have to be 21 to go to a bar? Now, we’ve gone from Native American kids getting $200k for graduating to Ho-Chunks getting Net Profit Distribution from gaming.

A couple of bartenders from Sunset Tavern are interviewed.

“We see what they do with their money so that makes you a little sour. You see them at Walmart on the first of the month. And you see the things that they’re buying ... it’s nothing but garbage. Then they turn around and sell it because they want to come out here and drink,” says one of the bartenders.

I wonder what question Kleeman asked. Was it pertaining to “18 money”? It sounds like the bartenders are generalizing about Ho-Chunk people. Another person at the bar talks about prejudice shoved in your face and that he doesn’t believe anyone is “owed that.” Again, what question is he answering?

After the bar scene, Klee-man took a tour with Nehomah Thundercloud to tribal communities in Black River Falls. Kleeman asked Thundercloud what prejudices she believed were held by white Americans.

“That we are drunk and poor. Or that all Indians have casinos. I think in reality there’s a few tribes that have found gaming to be successful,” said Thundercloud.

“Through purchasing land we have some housing subdivisions that are in the Jackson County area.”

“You’ve actually bought some land from the profits from the casinos? You’ve bought American land and turned it into Ho-Chunk land?” Kleeman asked.

“There’s kind of an irony to that? They’ve took that land away from you, and now you’re buying it back,” continued Kleeman.

Kleeman and Thundercloud continue their discussion at the powwow grounds.

“Would you say that the Ho-Chunk Nation has a different attitude towards money than Americans do?” asked Kleeman.

“Yes. I would agree with that. When you grow up with very limited funds, it’s very difficult to plan for the future. We come from a more community thought. Not just our nuclear family, but extended family, making sure we’re taking care of everyone. There’s more honor and prestige in giving, than in accumulating,” replied Thundercloud.

Kleeman’s next stop is a visit with President Jon Greendeer. Kleeman explains Greendeer wanted to change the payment of “18 money”.

“Dropping $100,000 on someone who just turned 18 is not the right thing to do. So change has to come. The community has to embrace and welcome. There’s a long learning curve for financial success. And it’s not going to happen overnight,” said Greendeer.

Kleeman summed it up best in an interview with Leader-Telegram Reporter Chuck Rupnow for his story, “British filmmaker examines Ho-Chunk’s ‘18 money’ program.”

“These kids aren’t like New York trust fund kids who get a huge endowment when they come of age — they don’t have generations of experience behind them telling them how best to use their money. It’s something they have to work out themselves, in their own time,” said Kleeman.

So what is the solution? Do we need to change the way Children’s Trust Funds are distributed?

My knowledge of trust funds comes from the TV show, Beverly Hills, 90210. The character Dylan McKay is a trust fund kid. When he wanted to spend money, he’d have to get approval from an advisor. Dylan didn’t just buy the Peach Pit, a restaurant in the show, on a whim.

The grads need to be connected to a similar advisor. Having an extra safeguard between the account holder and the money will ensure good spending practices. It’d be great to see more or all the kids put their money to work for them.

Whose responsibility is it to provide financial options to Ho-Chunk graduates? I’m sure we have tribal members with skills to advise the grads on handling their trust fund money.

During a recent Family Wellness Retreat, James Anderson, the son of Famous Dave Anderson, said money is a resource. Money is a resource that will allow us access to other resources. In the case of “18 money,” the other resources should be more money with a college education, being qualified for higher paying jobs, a better quality of life, and later in life a large savings for retirement.

Skenandore sworn in as Associate Supreme Court judge

Ken Luchterhand
Staff Writer

Samantha Skenandore has a new role within the Ho-Chunk Nation.

Skenandore was sworn in as Associate Supreme Court Justice at a special ceremony at the Executive Building atrium on Wednesday, September 23.

The oath was given by Ho-Chunk Election Board Chair Bridget Schultz.

Offering words of support was former President Jon Greendeer, who offered her a gift for the occasion. The gift was a gavel made by the family from white cedar.

Skenandore also received a Pendleton from Myrna Little-wolf of the Election Board.

Skenandore has been a practicing attorney since 2006, spending 110 to 200 hours a month performing research and working on cases.

“I have been privileged to work in private practice,” she said. “It will help me bring in a perspective from an outside arena.”

She believes the Ho-Chunk Nation has a good precedence of giving clear explanations and reasoning in the decisions brought before the court.

“For 20 years, they have spent a lot of time and energy on their decisions. Often other native courts decisions don’t explain a lot. They have spent a great deal of time providing thorough decisions, all reasoning consistent in the ways of administrative justice.”

Supreme Court justices don’t just spend all their time hearing individual cases, she said. They also review judicial rules and pay close attention to how those rules are applied.

“We have to be meticulous to make sure everyone has access to justice and access to the law,” Skenandore said. “The goal for the judiciary is to set rules so people have as much access to law as possible.”

Sparta Battle of the Badges Blood Drive set for Oct. 10

Submitted by Tracy Fox, American Red Cross

Eligible blood donors in the Sparta area are being asked to roll up their sleeves and partner with local first responders in the Battle of the Badges blood drive with the Monroe County Sheriff’s Department, Sparta Ambulance Services, Sparta Fire and Sparta Police Department.

The Sparta community hosts Red Cross blood drives regularly but was looking for a way to provide a unique lifesaving opportunity. Blood drive coordinator, Connie Jerome, said, “Sparta is very generous when it comes to donating blood. I am hoping this blood drive enhances and provides yet another wonderful opportunity to help save lives.”

Attendees are able to make a blood donation on behalf of the participating departments. Although the departments have fun competing, the real goal is to raise awareness about the constant need for blood and how the community can make a difference. “We work very closely with all the departments involved and usually have shared staff. It’s nice to get together for a fun event versus an actual call,” said Staci Tenner, Sparta Area Ambulance Director.

Battle of the Badges Blood Drive

October 10, 2015 from 7:30 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. at the Sparta Fire Station #2, 118 E Oak Street. Sparta, WI 54656 must collect about 15,000 pints of blood every day to meet the needs of patients across the country. Donors with all blood types are needed, especially those with types O negative, A negative and B negative. To make a donation appointment, please call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767) or visit redcross-blood.org.

How to donate blood

Simply download the American Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit redcrossblood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767) to make an appointment or for more information. All blood types are needed to ensure a reliable supply for patients. A blood donor card or driver’s license or two other forms of identification are required at check-in. Individuals who are 17 years of age (16 with parental consent in some states), weigh at least 110 pounds and are in generally good health may be eligible to donate blood. High school students and other donors 18 years of age and younger also have to meet certain height and weight requirements.

About the American Red Cross

The American Red Cross shelters, feeds and provides emotional support to victims of disasters; supplies about 40 percent of the nation’s blood; teaches skills that save lives; provides international humanitarian aid; and supports military members and their families. The Red Cross is a not-for-profit organization that depends on volunteers and the generosity of the American public to perform its mission. # Simplify your workout!

Submitted by Kathleen Clemons, Exercise Physiologist

Do you skip your workout because at times it feels too complicated? Well try the simple routine below. It can be done in a chair, standing, low impact or high impact. Fit it to your current fitness level. The program is 10 minutes long. If you did it three times a day, that would be your thirty minutes. And, if you did it five times a week, that would be your 150 minutes – the recommended amount of physical activity we should all be getting in. So don’t delay, put some fun music on or your favorite TV show and start moving!

10 exercises, 1 minute each
You need you and a stopwatch or clock

1. Alternating kicks
2. Alternating punches
3. Alternating knees up
4. Alternating punch across your body
5. Alternating leg taps to the side
6. Shoulder rolls – both shoulders same time, do some front and do some back
7. Alternating heel digs - tap heel in front of you on the floor
8. Alternate swim arms – act like you are in a pool and just swimming a front stroke
9. Heel raises – both at same time
10. Stand up sit downs – do very slow and at your own pace

Pac Haci Youth Council holds Prevent Suicide Conference

Submitted by Lynette Le-Garde/HCN Legislature-PR
The Pac Haci Youth Council held the Prevent Suicide Conference on September 18-20, 2015 at Northcentral Technical College in Wausau, Wisconsin. Aliyah Cloud-Pac Haci Youth Council President, Lanette Walker-Youth Service Program Director and Vice President Darren Brinegar made opening remarks to the crowd and welcomed the attendees to the conference. The keynote speaker Iris PrettyPaint, Ph.D. revealed data she has been collecting about suicide in Native American communities. 50% of people who die from suicide have major depression. 90% of people who commit suicide have a mental disorder.

Suicide programs that are successful must have a tie into the leadership of the tribe for buy-in and success of a program. Dr. PrettyPaint has been working on a study that focuses on what makes us strong. What makes a person healthy and happy? She wanted to focus on the strengths and build a strategic cultural approach which takes into consideration spiritual beliefs, language, elders, songs, dances, art, sweats, powwows, sports, talking circles, 5K, golf, etc.

The conference had breakout sessions which covered topics on domestic violence, AODA, mental health, leadership, identity/historical trauma, and mental health.

Pac Haci Youth Council President Aliyah Cloud gives a welcome and opening remarks at the Prevent Suicide Conference on September 18 at Northcentral Technical College in Wausau, WI.

Iris PrettyPaint, Ph.D., addresses conference participants. During her keynote speech, she shared her knowledge of statistics and efforts to prevent suicide.

Rep. Andrea Estebo leaves at 2:35 p.m.

Ethics Review Board Presentation: Members of the Ethics Review Board were present to discuss proposed amendments that were made through the board and legislators. The Code of Ethics has gone out for comment and the comments have been reviewed at an Ethics Review Board Meeting. The ERB provided talking points to the Amended Code of Ethics. Talking Points: ERB Proposed Comments to Resolution 03-03-15 L, ERB Proposed Edits to the Code of Ethics Act as last Amended by Resolution 04-08-14L, the original Code of Ethics called for the Attorney General to write Preliminary Advisory Opinions when requested and limited the requests to only the Executive Branch, the last revisions shifted the Preliminary Advisory Opinions to be written by the Ethics Review Board but carried forward the limitation that requests could only come from the Executive Branch, this would allow Public Officials from any branch of Ho-Chunk Government to request a Preliminary Advisory Opinion from the Ethics Review Board. Frivolous Complaints-Revision brings clarity to the prosecution of a final decision concerning a frivolous complaint. Rep. Henning Garvin mentions one of the concerns was the dollar value of any gifts that were received from elected officials that had to be reported to the ERB. It was made mention of an investigation that was requested from Madison and Milwaukee regarding allegations of wrong doing by the Ethics Review Board. FOR THE RECORD: Per the Ho-Chunk Nation Attorney General Amanda WhiteEagle, an investigation did occur and it didn’t provide any information to show that the Ethics Review Board had operated outside of the laws of the Ho-Chunk Nation. Rep. Andrea Estebo left for a family emergency. MOTION by Rep. Henning Garvin to move into Executive Session. Second by Rep. David Greendeer. 10-1(Vice President Darren Brinegar)-0 MOTION CARRIED. 2:46 p.m. MOTION by Rep. Henning Garvin to move into Open Session. Second by Rep. HO-CHUNK NATION

PEOPLE OF THE BIG VOICE

General Council

But Sandra Blackdeer disagreed. “We already have too many departments,” she said. “I think it will be going by the way, just like the bison farm and Whirling Thunder. And as for eating healthy – you don’t have to go out and buy pizza and soda. You can make things from scratch. It’s not unheard of.”

The resolution passed with 61.5 percent (899) who approve, 30.7 percent (449) against and 7.7 percent (113) abstaining from the vote.

A resolution to approve the General Council Agency’s budget was met with stiff opposition, failing to be passed by a vote of 29.7 percent (463) agreeing, 61 percent (952) against and 9.3 percent (952) abstaining.

According to the Appropriation and Budget Act, the General Council Agency must submit a budget for the General Council on an annual basis.

The $1.36 million budget drew some harsh criticism from several speakers, while being defended by members of GCA.

“I question if this should be approved while GCA is being investigated and while there is $70,000 in funds that is unrec- onciled,” said Hazel Guerrero. “I don’t understand why they still have control.”

“It’s hard to approve over $1 million when we can’t even see what it is for,” said Gloria Visitin.

“The budget is in a booklet that you received today,” Said Joy Thompson of the GCA.

Mandy Mann pointed out a portion on the budget on page 60.

“The mileage paid is outrageous,” Mann said. “Someone needs to look at this budget.”

“What are they doing with all this mileage they are claiming? This is not even training with all this mileage,” said Nuria Ortiz.

Rhonda Hunt of the GCA pointed out that a lot of the budget is used for General Council meetings and that it is a lot of work to produce the meeting.

Jeremy Rockman brought forth a resolution to provide funding for the Veterans Home Ownership Act. It has been four years since the poli- cies and procedures protocol was presented to the Legisla- ture and the public comment period was held and expired with no adverse comments. The Veterans Advisory Board contacted Rockman to draft the resolution to be pre- sented to General Council for the purposes of making the HCN Veterans Affairs Divi- sion a separate and autono- mous department and have the ability to determine the veter- ans who will receive housing. The resolution objected that HCN Housing, in March 2015, indicated that only “combat veterans” receive a home, to which Rockman objected.

The resolution called for the Department of Veterans Af- fairs to become autonomous, and that the Veterans Home Ownership Act become fund- ed with oversight given to the Veterans Affairs Committee.

The resolution passed with a vote of 59.1 percent (678) in favor, 27.9 percent (320) against and 13.1 percent (150) abstaining.

Marlys WhiteEagle intro- duced a resolution to hold the annual General Council meet- ing every third Saturday in September. It passed with 64 percent (939) voting in favor, 26.2 percent (384) against and 9.9 percent (145) abstaining.

Cecelia Kraus brought forth a resolution to endorse the Declaration of Extraterritori- ality. The resolution spells out the establishment of a 62-mile buffer zone of tribal commu- nity members to any frac sand mining practices.

“This is to counteract the threat to air, water and land and the toxicity which this industry effects upon our people,” Kraus said. “These companies are coming into Indian lands and are giving no consideration to the people.”

Sharice Davids supported the resolution, saying that frac sand mining is not safe for the people.

“These companies are mak- ing billions and this is a way to say this is not okay at the cost of health,” Davids said.

The resolution was ap- proved with a 74 percent (1071) vote, 14.4 percent (209) against and 11.5 percent (167) abstaining.

William Greendeer provid- ed a resolution to amend the Ho-Chunk Nation Constitu- tion to provide support for the rights of nature.

“We don’t have anything in the Constitution to defend the rights of the deer, the birds, the plants, the water and the soil,” Greendeer said. “We re-

Jeremy Rockman speaks in favor of a resolution that offers housing to veterans, regardless of whether they were involved in combat or not.

ally need to put something in the Constitution.”

Greendeer pointed out that trees are being cut down every day for electrical transmission lines and gas lines and leav- ing a path of destruction in its wake.

“As people, we need to stop all this destruction,” he said. “We need to give rights to nature.” The resolution passed with a vote of 70.4 percent (893), with 14.4 percent (182) against and 15.2 percent (193) abstaining.

Libby Fairchild offered a resolution to amend the elec- tion code to allow use of the U.S. Postal System for elec- tions. The resolution suggested that for Ho-Chunk elec- tions, paper ballots would be used which could be mailed in, instead of the current use of polling places.

The resolution was defeat- ed, with a vote of 43.8 percent (598) in favor, 48.4 percent (660) against, and 7.8 percent (106) abstaining.

The annual General Council meeting, addressing nine resolutions, was held at the Alliance Energy Center in Madison.

Libby Fairchild introduces a resolution to the election code to allow ballots to be filed by mail.

Gary Puckett and Union Gap to hit the stage October 18

Ken Luchterhand
Staff Writer

At the time, the group was a huge sensation, with their songs hitting the airwaves and topping the pop charts.

They were known as Gary Puckett and the Union Gap, donning Civil War era Union uniforms and during the 1960s and 70s, and having hit the top of the charts with hits like “Young Girl,” “Lady Willpower,” and “Over You.”

Gary Puckett and the Union Gap Band will be performing at 3:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Sunday, October 18, at Ho-Chunk Gaming – Black River Falls. Also singing that night will be Mark Lindsay, former lead singer of the Raiders.

“Mostly the show is built around the hits and the album cuts of the Union Gap’s career,” Puckett said. “Most of it is the songs people know, but over the years you find the songs that the fans have grown to love besides the hits. We have a number of songs that the fans seem to have gravitated towards. We have included many of the songs and sometimes we do some other things just for fun, such as a Roy Orbison tune or a Dion tune or something like that. I grew up with Elvis, so we might do something by Elvis. You just never know.”

The original band consisted of Gary Puckett, Kerry Chatter, Gary “Mutha” Withem, Dwight Bement, and Paul Wheatbread.

“I’m the only original Union Gap guy left from the group. They’re all alive and well, but we just don’t work together anymore,” Puckett said. “I’ve got a different band now that I call ‘The Union Gap Band’ and they’re every bit as good as the original band. They’ve become my friends over the years that we’ve been together. So I always look forward to working with them.”

The name “Union Gap” may seem a little odd to name a band after, but it was all part of a scheme.

“Yes, it was all my idea. Union Gap is actually a city in the southeast part of Washington state, part of the Yakima Valley, established in 1883. I used to have a picture of the covered wagon that they used as a symbol of Union Gap,” he said.

“I grew up, my formative years, in the Yakama Valley in the state of Washington and Union Gap was just a place I went. When I was 15, I would hitchhike my way down there on Saturdays to do my Saturday job for a company called Industrial Air Products Company.

The company had a number of trucks and delivered industrial air cylinders of all kinds to businesses and homes.

“Years later, when I had put the band together and I was trying to figure out how we could go about putting together a recording career and image. I realized, at one point, someone told me that there were anywhere from 400-500 records that were going out to radio stations every month. And radio stations only had a ‘Top 40.’ So how do a few new groups get on to that ‘Top 40?’” he said.

“One, you have to have a great sounding record and two, maybe you have to have a look and a picture that is in front of the D.J. or the program director so they say, ‘So, this looks interesting. Who are these guys?’” Puckett said.

The original group were known for wearing blue Union uniforms from the Civil War era, something that became sort of a trademark with the band.

“In our era, we were wearing tie-dyes and fringes and high platform shoes and hippies and all the people on the street were wearing the same thing. I thought that maybe if we look different, then we might have a shot at auditioning our records,” Puckett said. “So, I thought, I really love the Civil War period in time and I went, ‘Yes! Union soldier. I like blue. Union Gap. That makes sense. It’s a name. It’s an image. It’s some connection to me.’ So I said, ‘Here is what we’re going to do fellows. We’re going to wear a costume or an outfit that is patterned after the Union soldiers of 1861-1865.’”

Actually, as it turned out, a disc jockey in Columbus, Ohio, was a Civil War historian, and he saw the picture on the album and said, “I love this picture. What’s on the record?”

He listened to it and loved it, so he put it on the station and it went to number one on WCOL in Columbus.

The Columbia Records promotional regional office in Cleveland saw that activity and they called Puckett and said he wanted to bring the band to Cleveland. He then took them to Columbus and cities nearby, shake some hands and meet some people and try to promote the record into a hit, he said.

“So, we went to work at a place called Otto’s Grotto. It was in the basement on the Sheridan Hotel in the dead of winter. Nighttime we worked 9 to 2 and during the day we tried to make some radio friends. And it helped,” Puckett said.

The Union uniforms helped them launch their career and Puckett has never forgot that point.

“We started wearing the jackets again, as a matter of fact,” Puckett said. “The drummer’s wife made some shirt jackets. I actually am bringing along, and wearing for the first time, the second original jacket that was on the ‘Young Girl’ album.”

There was a time when Puckett was not making music. In 1973, he opted to study acting and dance and to perform in theaters around Los Angeles.

“Maybe if I were to do it all over again, maybe I would pursue the acting and dancing a little harder. But you know all three of these world, they all intertwine and they’re all the same in certain ways,” Puckett said. “And I found myself more dwelling upon the music part of it.

“I enjoyed acting when I was being taught, and I had a leading role in a movie that was made in the Philippines in the middle 70s,” he said. “It never saw the light of day – it never got edited in a final version. So, it was a good experience and maybe it could have helped me to move along in the acting world. I guess I wasn’t serious enough about it to continue living in Los Angeles and fighting the fight, if you want to call it that.”

He loved acting and he considered it fun, but he also found it was long, long hours and a lot of “hurry up and wait” – a lot like his present business but much more.

“What dance did for me is kind of give me a ‘body center.’ Looking at the videos from that era, I was 25-26 years old and it was the Union Gap, I looked a lot of ‘stilted’ on stage. I didn’t have command of the stage and that is essentially what dancing did for me. It gave me the ability to be on stage and not give me the feeling I was going to fall off. Dance just gave me some extra movement and consciousness,” he said.

“I’m not a dancer now, either, and I don’t run around the stage. I’m not a guy who’s 26 anymore. We used to do that and have fun and kind of do the rock thing,” Puckett said. “Things change as the years go by and our type of music doesn’t call for that. But it still gave me the ability to feel at ease on my feet in front of all those people because it used to be when the red light went on, so to speak, or the record light, the spotlight went on, there was some – uh-oh – I might fall down. That’s really what it is.”

Puckett doesn’t ever see himself quitting or retiring. He might sort of semi-retire, meaning work through the summer months into the fall and stay away from the winter, he said. For now, he plans to continue to work year-round for a couple more years. Then he might start to take semi-retirement, like take off November through February.

“I’m still in good health and I think I have another 20 years to go,” Puckett said. “I doubt I’m going to quit. Music gets under skin and in your soul. You know, you want to do it. I play guitar every day when I’m not working, just because I want to practice – I want to get better. I want to learn something else.”

Puckett and his wife, Lorrie, have two adult girls and live in Clearwater, Florida. The older girl is Michaela who is studying to become a doctor. His other daughter is Sydney who has a degree in business and works in management for the Coach Company. She and her fiancé are looking at buying a house.

“No, they won’t pursue a career in music, they’re looking at leading a normal life,” he said.

Through the years, his passion for music is something that demands his full attention, but it also is something he loves doing.

“I need the music, I need the people, I love the music, I love the people, I’m very blessed in the fact that I was given many hit records and I was actually able to make a career out of it, though I’ve had my ups and downs through the years,” Puckett said. “We all make our choices – some are good and some are not – those sorts of things leads you to the place you are. Where we live and what you do.”

He and his wife live on an acre and a half of heavily planted property, which they both work at it constantly because it needs it, he said.

“We have 40 types of palms and she just loves the colors of the flowers that she plants. I’m very pleased,” Puckett said.

He also donates a large amount of his time and efforts to local charities.

“I do my best to help the vets where we can and we do some charity work here and there,” Puckett said. “I work with Special Olympics and I donate my time for the Humane Society. But I especially give my full devotion for the veterans. I help people whenever I can.”

He has made many decisions in his life about his career in music, but he is pretty satisfied on how it has all turned out.

“I suppose I could have been a bigger star, but the Lord had this in mind for me,” he said.

During the early years of Gary Puckett and the Union Gap, the Union uniforms were an essential part of their trademark look and they used that approach on their album covers.

Ho-Chunk Gaming Black River Falls donates $3,200 to Jackson Co. Little League

Submitted by Tris Harris, Senior Manager-Public Relations, Ho-Chunk Gaming ~ Black River Falls

Ho-Chunk Gaming Black River Falls held a Coed Softball Tournament July 31st-August 2nd at the Sandpillow Ball Field. There were teams from all over Wisconsin as far south as Milwaukee and north as Wausau. 1st place went to the team In It To Win It from Waukegan, IL receiving $2,000.

Entry fees of $200 were collected from each team and then it was decided that the entry fees would be donated to the Jackson Co. Little League (JCLL) organization. The JCLL has decided start a new program and hire a coach to teach the basics for different age groups during daytime hours over a 6 week period. The coach would focus on a different aspect of the game on specific days and by the time the students reached high school, they would be equipped with the right mechanics of the game.

Ho-Chunk Gaming Black River Falls is hoping to continue this Coed Softball Tournament annually in order to raise money for organizations that keep children and adults exercising and healthy. For more information about the Jackson Co. Little League organization, you can call their President, Steve Peterson at 715-284-9246.

Audit Bureau turns 50, receives national recognition and calls for its demise

Submitted by Senator Kathleen Vinehout, WI State Senator

“Fix the broken programs, get rid of the ones that don’t work and fund those that are working.” There’s not a state candidate around that would disagree with this statement.

Yet there are some in the Legislature that would eliminate the very source of information on which programs are a waste of taxpayer dollars and where the broken programs need fixing.

For fifty years, auditors at the nonpartisan Legislative Audit Bureau (LAB) have assisted legislators and the people of Wisconsin in answering questions about dollars spent. Questions like, “Did we get our money’s worth out of that program?”

Skilled public sector auditors perform financial audits on various funds in state government, like the lottery or the Patient’s Compensation Fund. They examine federal dollars to assure the state is compliant with federal law in the annual Single Audit. Auditors also review state operations in the LAB review of the Comprehensive Annual Financial Audit released near the end of the year.

The National State Auditors Association recently awarded the highest rating possible to the LAB’s financial audit division. Very experienced auditors put the LAB’s programs and policies through a rigorous review. These examinations are conducted every three years. Wisconsin’s LAB has consistently received the highest ratings possible.

But financial audits are only half of the award winning work done by the LAB. Program evaluations, answering questions like did this program meet its goals, is the other half of the work of the Audit Bureau.

While the work of the financial division seldom makes headlines, the program evaluation auditors often find their work under the spotlight. Recently a GOP Assembly proposal called for eliminating the LAB. Capitol rumors said elimination was in retaliation for the embarrassing failures made public in three audits over the past three years of the Wisconsin Economic Development Corporation (WEDC).

But far from cause for elimination of the nonpartisan watchdog, the program auditors of the Legislative Audit Bureau were rewarded with national recognition for their work on WEDC and similar critically important program audits.

The National Legislative Program Evaluation Society recognized the work of the LAB with its distinguished Certificate of Impact for the 2013 FoodShare audit; the 2014 Wisconsin Economic Development Corporation audit; and the 2015 Supervised Release Placement and Expenditure audit. The recent national accolades should reassure voters and lawmakers of the LAB’s stellar work. Too often lawmakers say they want to know which programs work and which do not, but their actions tell us otherwise. Recent actions such as cutting funding for an outside evaluation for the Drug Court (Treatment Alternative Diversion) program. Or by budget action creating four or five alternative tests for students in publically funded private school programs, making accurate comparisons between public and private school student achievement extremely difficult.

Facts matter. Facts lead us to conclusions that might be popular politically. That’s exactly why we need the nonpartisan Legislative Audit Bureau. If we truly care about creating a well-run state government no one should shy away from the facts nonpartisan auditors present to us – regardless of political implications.

This summer the Beloit Daily News editorialized about the importance of independent agencies in state government. The editorial lauded the LAB saying the agency “has earned a strong reputation for impartiality and independence from partisan political influence.”

Nonpartisan agencies like the Audit Bureau, the Fiscal Bureau and the Government Accountability Board play a key role in a well-functioning state government. The Beloit Daily News warns us:

“TAXPAYERS, TAKE NOTE. Agencies like the GAB, the Audit Bureau and the Fiscal Bureau exist under a mandate to serve truth, not politics. That’s in the best interest of the people, if not the politicians.”

“Understandably, the powerful object to any outfit they can’t control. But government watchdogs must not be muzzled and broken to the partisan leash.”

Instead, let us laud the work of our nonpartisan agencies. Join me in congratulating the LAB on excellent accomplishments and national recognition.

And wish the agency another 50 years of exceptional work serving as “the steward of the people’s money.”

Preparing the Next Generation of Leaders: Our Most Precious Resource

The Wisconsin Inter Tribal Child Care Association will be featuring William Kellibrew IV, Activist & Expert of Violence, at the Lac Courte Oreilles Convention Center, 13767 W County Road B in Hayward, WI on October 9, 2015 from 9:00 am - 4:00 pm. The cost of the conference is $25.

William Kellibrew IV, from Washington, D.C., is an international advocate for civil, human, women, children, and victims’ rights. He is a sought-after speaker on violence, trauma, trauma-informed care, and children exposed to violence. At age six, he was sexually abused by his mom’s neighbor and at age ten, he watched helplessly as his mother and twelve-year-old brother were shot in their living room by his mother’s estranged boyfriend. Mr. Kellibrew has appeared on Oprah, MSNBC, BBC, and many others. He was also recognized by The White House as a Champion of Change.

As a child, William’s passion was to be a performer. After witnessing the murders of his mother and 12-year-old-brother at age 10, William continued to learn his craft, but with immense challenges and barriers from violence, sexual abuse and trauma. Spiraling into a world of truancy, violence, trauma, depression, substance use, gangs, guns and suicidal ideation, he nearly gave up on life. Today, William believes that his challenges were disguised as opportunities. In this presentation, William engages the audience on the importance of core values and how they play a role in preventing the barriers and challenges from claiming out youth and their potential. William also focuses on building on our youth’s strengths versus their deficits.

“If we see children as our most precious resource,” William says, “we value them and the role that they play for our future.”
